This passage is about the author's experience of avoiding meeting her friend who has nothing to do, but a lot of spare time to kill. Generally speaking, it is not so polite to ask someone to share his or her time while

This passage is about a robbery. The woman in the story risked her life to catch the thieves. It is controversial whether people should stop a robbery or stealing by immediate actions. Many companies have rules to prohibit employees ^{from} taking actions in these cases. On the other hand, some people still think to stop a crime such as robbery, stealing, ^{or} burglary is a heroic act. I believe we should think about risks involved before take any actions for the following reasons. First of all, the only goal of robbery or thieves is to take your goods away. When you run after those people, the situation might be escalated. They may take dangerous measures to anyone who intend to stop them. Your life is worth more than any of the goods lost. Additionally, your actions may cause other innocent people to hurt as those ^{be} ~~people~~ ^{robbers} go mad if they think they will be caught. Moreover, you are not prepared for the event and your attempt to stop them ^{might} ~~is~~ ^{this kind of situation} most probably not work well. Thus, the good strategy is to quickly alert security guards or policemen and let these professionals ~~to~~ handle it.

This passage is about ^{an} old car race. Old cars, especially some ^{with} famous brands, are precious because there are few left. Moreover, old car owners often have some connection to their car with good memories about their past. Nowadays, ^{the} old car exchange is a big market, and therefore it is a good choice for people with a tight budget to own a car. It is ^a very cost-efficient solution if you are lucky enough not to get a so called "lemon ~~car~~". However, it is not so easy to get an ideal second-hand car because it is hard to detect hidden problems such as those of engines or other key components. The chances are high that you ^{will} send ^{the} car to a repair store after using it for a few days. The choosing of old cars ^{that} needs you ^{requiring} having good judgment ^{do not} about cars. However, these who are capable ^{of} fixing cars by themselves ^{are not} worry about such problems and ^{they} often are able to find a second-hand car with little money ^{which} while it ^{will} still be running for quite a long time. Hence, choosing a second-hand car is a task of combining luck ^{and} and knowledge about cars. The better you know cars, the greater the chances you ^{will} get ~~something~~ value-added second-hand cars.

This passage is about a free show provided by an advertisement company. The speaker there was nervous and made funny mistakes.

Talking about advertisements, some people think that they can provide ^{the} most direct comprehensive information about products;

^(On the other hand,) thus people might save a lot of time in shopping. However, ~~many~~

^{are} others against advertisements because they find there are some
