This passage is about ^{the} author's experience of a dinner party. Dinner party ^{is} a place of social gathering for new and old friends while ^{are} enjoying foods. ^{they} It usually lasts for 2 to 3 hours. People ⁱⁿ the party share their experiences and exchange ideas on interesting topics. Nevertheless, enjoying foods is also ^{the} a main ^{subject} activity. The foods presented show hospitality of host and they bring ^{the} arts of cooking and ^a great taste ^{to} ^{there} a table. ^{It} is no doubt that ^{attendants} need to communicate ^(by talking) to each other as this can also enhance ^a good atmosphere in such a party. To take feeling ^{of} other people ^{into} consideration, a dinner party goer ^{should} balance between eating and talking.

As a dinner custom, ^{it} is ^{impolite} to ^{take} too much during eating. ^{for} ^{not good} ^{three reasons.}

First, for ^{his} own health, one should not talk too much while eating because it clearly affects one's digestion. ^{Secondly}, it is ill-mannered to disturb other's ^{appetite} for food. ^{Moreover}, there is ^a plenty of time to talk during drinking and after dinner hours. It is ^{advised} to talk less while eating, ^{and} you will be a more popular ^{guest} ^{at} parties.
