This passage is about business a trip of an engineer to Australian. A lot of people feel that trips, especially business ones, are an exciting experience for several reasons. A few of them ~~have~~ ^{provide a} chances to meet different people in a new place, a way to escape ^{the} dull routines of everyday life, and ^{an opportunity to} promoting understanding of culture ^{an} and customs, etc. However, people ~~are~~ often mix illusion with reality.

^A The business trip is usually short; thus, it is very hard to ^{gain} ~~have~~ deep understanding of ^{the} real life ^{of} about local people.

It is true that you can meet kindly people because they treat you as ^a guest with a lot of ^{facial} ~~face~~ friendly ^{ness}. It is no doubt that you are exciting ^{ed by} as many things ^{that} are new and different. For example, you can live in ^a hotel and eat at good restaurants every day. On a business trip, you even do not worry ^{about} paying your big expenses ^{as} by yourselves ^{for}.

Moreover, you can escape part of your daily routine, but this can ^{only} be lasted ~~only~~ for a short period of time as eventually you ~~will~~ ^{go} have to back home and work as usual.
