Sarah

This passage is about an actress who tries hard to ~~be~~ looked younger. ^{the} ~~To~~ attraction ~~of~~ audience is a key element to successful plays or films. As most ~~of~~ audiences ^{are} are young people, it is natural that they like young and beautiful actors or actresses with less so-called generation gap. Moreover, TV, pictures ^{in news} on papers and cover photographs ^s on magazines greatly promote the popularity of young actors or actresses. To keep competitive, it is necessary, especially for actresses, to cater ^{to} ~~for~~ the taste of audiences and try all means to look younger. Careful ^{choosing the right} ~~dressing~~ and make-up can help a bit, but it cannot last longer ^{or forever}. Despite the ^{high demand of} ~~show industry~~ is a playground for young ~~actress~~ ^{performing artists}; there are still some roles for older ones, if they play good enough. ^B ~~The~~ beauty can fade away, but skills will remain, and thus old ~~actresses~~ ^{artists} can still climb their career ~~ladders~~. There are many successful stories about ^{actors or} ~~actresses~~ who become managers, directors and owners of entertainment companies. In their new roles, they can continue use ^{to} their performing skills and help younger ones as well.
