In this passage, Frank Hawkins is a social climber, who tried ladders in every way to climb the social ladders. People may think his success story is nothing but a polished personal history of a rich man, who takes ~~the~~ advantage of industry changes. As far as I ^{am} concerned, however, I believe that his success is the results of his diligence and his clear vision to grow his company bigger. He had a big dream, but ^{his journey} start real. His small workshop ^{was} ~~is~~ a practical beginning from his earlier years of bicycle repairing experience. Despite other factors, such as ~~the~~ ^{the} booming of airplane industry, his good services and good luck may ^{have} also directly contribute ^{d to} his business success. His step by step ^{patience} attitudes and his ^{or approaches} ~~patients~~ lead his way to success, which ~~can~~ ^{could} not be copied by most ~~of~~ others. He ~~may~~ be the only one known ~~for~~ his hardship and suffering in all these years. He is truly a self-made millionaire. Our society needs as many industrious people like him as possible.
