The writer tells us about a person <sup>who</sup> hid himself in a box to avoid a <sup>buying</sup> plane ticket. He tried to be clever to save money but <sup>ended</sup> up to pay <sup>having</sup> more than <sup>for</sup> a normal ticket. This <sup>these</sup> kind of activities to avoid paying fare can happen <sup>and</sup> in ships, trains, cars as well. I think people should not take risks <sup>this</sup> ~~yet~~ to try as it is uncomfortable and even dangerous.

First, hiding in a small place is definitely uncomfortable especially <sup>if</sup> a trip takes <sup>many</sup> ~~for~~ long hours. People can not move <sup>in a box</sup> due limited space and also worried <sup>they are</sup> ~~to~~ be caught. Certainly, it is a bad experience even if one is not ~~been~~ caught. Moreover, it is very dangerous for the box <sup>might</sup> ~~may~~ do not handled in a careful way or even drop <sup>pad</sup> from a high place. One's life can be in danger these cases. For example, there are some <sup>people who</sup> reported that <sup>then</sup> ~~luggage~~ <sup>was</sup> handled rudely. Further, some boxes <sup>might</sup> ~~may~~ go to a wrong <sup>place</sup> by accident. There are too many risks involved <sup>so that</sup> even ~~the~~ extremely poor people should not try this <sup>to do</sup> way.

This passage is about a series of events which led to a disaster; sticky fingers. As stated by Murphy's ~~laws~~ that 'if anything can go wrong, it will.' For example, people are worried about possibly falling down on a snowy day, but on high probability they will finally fall to the ground even when trying their best. To delay Murphy's laws from happening in our everyday life and reducing its bad effects, people need to do things according to certain procedures. For instance, in this story, there is a chain of events such as marking tarts, picking up telephone, signing a registered letter, etc. The key event here is the processes of making tarts which is spoiled by two other events. Of course, one can refuse to be interrupted, but to be realistic, people should be able to handle unexpected things or do multi-tasks by handling things in a proper way. I think if people can follow a good procedure when stopping and then resuming a process, they should be able to prevent thing to go wrong by these unexpected disturbances.

This passage is about a person who seems <sup>to</sup> like fishing, but he actually likes

~~to~~ sitting in a boat and doing nothing at all. Nowadays, fishing as a hobby attracts many people all over the world. There are many reasons for people

<sup>patience</sup> their patience, and it is also a good way to spend their free time. First of all, fishing is a skill which needs a lot of practices. It starts with the preparation

<sup>of</sup> ~~for~~ bits to attract fish, and various tools such as rod, hooks, etc. Next, fishing requires a great patience as catching fish takes time until a fish bites a hook.

In ~~the~~ contemporary time, keeping patience is an important skill for people's work and life. Furthermore, as now people are living in a fast-paced society and they are so busy with their work and lives, ~~thus~~ a relaxation is very important. Fishing provides people with a good way to escape from their

<sup>Because</sup> dull routines of everyday life. ~~For~~ fishing spots are usually close to big rivers or seas, it gives anglers a chance <sup>to be more</sup> to close to nature. This can explain why most people are <sup>ing</sup> not so care about how many fish they can catch, but <sup>are</sup> really enjoying fishing as a great experience <sup>during</sup> at their leisure hours.

This passage is about business a trip of an engineer to Australian. A lot of people feel that trips, especially business ones, are an exciting experience for several reasons. A few of them ~~have~~ <sup>provide a</sup> chances to meet different people in a new place, a way to escape <sup>the</sup> dull routines of everyday life, and <sup>an opportunity to</sup> promoting understanding of culture <sup>an</sup> and customs, etc. However, people ~~are~~ often mix illusion with reality.

It is true that you can meet kindly people because they treat you as <sup>a</sup> guest with a lot of <sup>facial</sup> ~~face~~ friendly <sup>ness</sup>. It is no doubt that you are <sup>ed by</sup> exciting <sup>that</sup> as many things are new and different. For example, you can live in <sup>a</sup> hotel and eat at good restaurants every day. On a business trip, you even do not worry <sup>about</sup> paying your big expenses <sup>as</sup> by yourselves <sup>for</sup>.

Moreover, you can escape part of your daily routine, but this can <sup>only</sup> be lasted ~~only~~ for a short period of time as eventually you ~~will~~ <sup>go</sup> have to back home and work as usual.

This passage is about <sup>the</sup> author's experience <sup>ing</sup> of the noise <sup>of</sup> living near an airport. Airports in large cities are usually a very busy place <sup>s</sup> as there are take-off <sup>s</sup> and landings <sup>s</sup> <sup>every</sup> in a few minutes. Modern jet planes make a lot of irritating noise; additionally, they send out a strong smell of kerosene. These pollutions have a lot of bad effects. People <sup>living near there</sup> are unable to sleep well <sup>x</sup> and easily get nervous, headache <sup>s</sup> <sup>or</sup> other <sup>problems</sup> diseases. To avoid this, the ultimate solution is <sup>to</sup> <sup>or</sup> move away <sup>from</sup> the airport ~~from~~ the area, but this is not a good idea for everybody. Someone may live in the area for many years and <sup>is</sup> ~~are~~ accustomed to the place <sup>or</sup> ~~of~~ house or work <sup>s</sup> nearby. Moreover, it is not easy to find a <sup>quiet</sup> new place in a big city. Alternatively, one can try to keep noise out of the house by sound proof glass; however, you have to use <sup>an</sup> air condition <sup>ex</sup> all years <sup>bad</sup> round to solve the ventilation problem, ~~but~~

There is little you can do ~~with~~ your garden.
