This passage is about ^{an} old car race. Old cars, especially some ^{with} famous brands, are precious because there are few left. Moreover, old car owners often have some connection to their car with good memories about their past. Nowadays, ^{the} old car exchange is a big market, and therefore it is a good choice for people with a tight budget to own a car. It is ^a very cost-efficient solution if you are lucky enough not to get a so called "lemon ~~car~~". However, it is not so easy to get an ideal second-hand car because it is hard to detect hidden problems such as those of engines or other key components. The chances are high that you ^{will} send ^{the} car to a repair store after using it for a few days. The choosing of old cars ^{that} needs you ^{requiring} having good judgment ^{do not} about cars. However, these who are capable ^{of} fixing cars by themselves ^{are not} worry about such problems and ^{they} often are able to find a second-hand car with little money ^{which} while it ^{will} still be running for quite a long time. Hence, choosing a second-hand car is a task of combining luck ^{and} knowledge about cars. The better you know cars, the greater the chances you ^{will} get ~~something~~ value-added second-hand cars.
